

Colloquium on Sexual Orientation Discrimination: A Constitutional Challenge

4th August 2018

Sexual orientation is relatively a recent notion in human rights law and one of the controversial one in practice. Prejudices, biases and negative stereotypes discrimination are deeply imbedded in our value system and patterns of behavior. For many of us the expression of homophobic prejudice remains both legitimate and respectable- in manner that will be unacceptable for any other minority.

The basic object of the colloquium is to bring in forefront the various confronting issues relating to sexual and gender based discrimination and to lay down the road map where equality and dignity will usher forever. The key speakers will include Social activists, Judges, Lawyers and Academicians.
