What makes a good paper? HINT: Editors and reviewers look for

- Originality – what's new about subject, treatment or results?
- Relevance to and extension of existing knowledge
- Recency and relevance of references
- Research methodology – are conclusions valid and objective?
- Clarity, structure and quality of writing
- Sound, logical progression of argument
- Theoretical and practical implications (the 'so what?' factors!)
- Adherence to the editorial scope and objectives of the journal

The environmental crisis is one of three major crises to human's development. But there are a series of issues in present for environmental law education of college students, such as this course, which are low offered and lack of sustainability, colleges and universities do not pay enough attention to it. They are weak in the relevant basic theory and they are lack of vocational training and so on. In order to solve the above problems, we can try to do the "two combinations". The first is the combination vocational training and basic knowledge and the second is combining vocational training in the classroom with outside of the classroom in environmental law.
