Q.2 Read the passage and answer the questions given below: (15)

India cannot but be a major factor for stability in Asia in the 21st century, an Asia with which the US must maintain regular, high-level dialogue. India and the US share a commitment to managing our multi-ethnic societies through democratic processes a commitment which could be a potent antidote to the poison of ethnic enmity now threatening many nations. With so many ways to take the Indo-US relationship forward, the Clinton visit should be seen in both countries as merely the starting point to what we can accomplish in this century.

Questions:

- a) What is the main thrust of the passage?
- b) What does the expression 'Potent antidote' mean in the passage?
- c) What can India contribute to Asia in the 21st Century?
- d) What is common between India and US?
- e) How does the speaker look at ethnic enmity?

There should be sustained nation-wide drive for the removal of all social disabilities from which people suffer. We must purge our society of man-made inequalities and injustices and provide for all equality of opportunity for personal well-being and social development. The awakening of our people from listless fatalism to self-awareness and self-assertion is a ground for hope. Our humanity must assert itself against all that destroys humanity. Let us hope, fight and suffer for the cause of men. The state is the servant of every citizen. Let us establish a society in which economic justice provision of equal opportunity are available for all the members of society.
