There are many forms of harm which are not actionable at law. Where damage is suffered without any violation of law, it is called "Damnum sine injuria" which is not a subject of redressal under the law. Fair competition in business is not actionable at law, but if the competition in business takes the shape of enmity, that is the hindering of business of the neighbour, it entitles him to take action against the wrong-doer. This action is actionable at law.
