Mahatama Gandhi was the greatest man of his time. He was born at Porbandar, a town in Gujarat, on October 2, 1869. His father was a Dewan in a state and his mother was an ideal woman. After getting education in India, he came back from there. In the beginning, he started his legal practice in South Africa. But shortly afterwards, he started the Satyagraha Movement to improve the miserable condition of the Indian settlers there. After the Gandhi-Smuts agreement, he returned to India. He regarded the principles of truth and non-violence as his best weapons for achieving India's freedom. He, therefore, started the Non-co-operation and Satyagraha Movements. Ultimately truth and non-violence were victorious, the British empire had to accept its defeat and India became independent.
