Translate the following paragraph into Hindi or Marathi

The basic faith of those who believe in democracy is that the common man has enough goodwill and common sense to govern well, that gives freedom and power, men will educate one another, will introduce better ways of life and habit of friendly co- operation and will in the long run creates a new society which will give the best possible opportunity of good life to all. A believer in democracy has faith in human nature, in the goodwill and political ability of the common man. But, uneducated people with no experience of self government are quite incapable of suddenly making a success of democracy. History shows that stable democracy is a slow growth that the people must have a long experience of self government and responsibility in many walks of life. They learn those qualities of tolerance of common- sense, of co- operation and of judgment which are essential in the citizens of a democracy.
