He was unarmed but he did not hesitate in taking on the terrorists who tried to barge into Parliament House on the 13th of December 2001, in the morning.

J. P. Yadav, the watch and ward member, who lost his life while preventing terrorists from entering the main building of Parliament House, is being remembered as a hero. Yadav closed the gate at Gate Number 12, which prevented a major catastrophe in the Parliament House.

Yadav was also one of the seven persons who were killed by the terrorists. Rajya Sabha vice chairperson Najma Heptullah praised Yadav saying the without him, the entire building could have come down. She said that without any arms. Yadav challenged the militants who were firing indiscriminately with their sophisticated weapons.

The terrorists had tried to enter the main Parliament building from Gate Number 12. As the white Ambassador car with a red beacon light reached the gate which is mainly used by members of the Rajya Sabha, Yadav asked it to stop but it did not. He mentioned something about the entry of terrorists over his walkie talkie and apparently shut the gate. The effort however, cost him his life.

Ms. Heptullah said that his death was a great loss, as Mr. Yadav was one of the finest officials in the watch and ward. She said the Parliament Secretariat would do whatever can be done for his family. Mr. Yadav was from Rajasthan and has two children. Remembering him, Ms. Heptullah said that he had been working in Parliament for many years now and had excellent in performing various duties.

A CPWD gardener Desraj died in the cross-fire between the militants and the security personnel. He was hit just outside the Gate Number 12, where Mr. Yadav was also lying dead.

A CRPF constable Kamlesh Kumar was the only woman killed in the attack. Four Delhi police personnel also lost their lives.

Questions:

- 1) When did the terrorist attack on the Parliament House take place?
- 2) Which gate was the terrorists car heading for? Did they get entry through that gate?
